

Kyann Flint (She/Her)

Child Life/Social Work

Kyann, a disabled activist, educates to increase understanding, dignity, and respect for the disabled community. After graduating from Western Washington University, Kyann became a disability rights consultant, held the title of Ms. Wheelchair Washington 2017, was the first woman on wheels to compete for the title of Miss Washington USA, and model for multiple inclusive ad campaigns. Currently, Kyann is a Recreational Leader at Max Higbee Center (a non-profit, rec center for people with developmental disabilities), a mentor at Seattle Children's through the Here Now Next pilot project, as well as pursuing a master's in child development at Central Washington University with the goal of becoming a Child Life Specialist. In her free time, she loves traveling and enjoys going to coffee with friends.
